Spotlight Initiative Compendium of Innovative and Good Practices and Lessons Learned

April 2024

Foreword

Mid-way through the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, violence against women and girls (VAWG) remains the most pervasive human rights violation in the world, and continues to be a significant barrier to development. Despite the progress made over the past three decades, globally, 1 in 3 women worldwide are still subjected to violence within their lifetime.

The converging and multi-faceted crises of the COVID-19 pandemic, climate change, conflict, and growing economic inequalities are exacerbating all forms of VAWG, while women's human rights continue to be eroded by fundamentalist and authoritarian movements. VAWG not only threatens women and girls' safety, health, and wellbeing, but limits their social and economic agency, furthers their marginalization, and, ultimately, prevents them from fulfilling their potential. The societal costs of violence profoundly impede collective progress and make the realization of the Sustainable Development Goals impossible.

Launched in 2017 with €500 million from the European Union, Spotlight Initiative is the largest targeted effort of the UN to end violence against women and girls. Over the past six years, the Initiative has radically shifted the landscape of programming on violence against women and girls. In more than 25 countries across five regions, the Initiative has employed a uniquely comprehensive, whole-of-society, whole-of-government approach that addresses all key drivers of violence against women and girls.

Embodying a set of principles that are at the core of the UN, Spotlight Initiative has pioneered a new way of working with communities, civil society and women's movements, ensuring meaningful engagement in governance, creating openings for political influence and decision making, and strengthening civic space. Spotlight Initiative has created critical partnerships in spaces where none existed before and built a new model of localization at state, district and community levels, placing VAWG at the centre of national development priorities, while supporting local communities to address violence in their specific contexts.

In alignment with the UN development system reforms, Spotlight Initiative represents a unique opportunity to move beyond piecemeal, disconnected, and small-scale interventions to a whole-of-UN approach which orients programming based on on-the-ground capacities, capitalising on the collective expertise, institutional knowledge, and resources of UN agencies to build more coherent, more effective programmes.

Spotlight Initiative's results to date have been transformational, demonstrating that catalytic change is possible when we truly prioritise women and girls. Since 2019, with Spotlight Initiative's support, the conviction rate for perpetrators of gender-based violence has doubled across 12 countries; almost 500 laws and policies have been signed to end violence against women and girls; national budgets to address gender-based violence have increased 10-fold across 14 countries; and 2.5 million women and girls have accessed gender-based violence services, as of 2022.

With this in mind, Spotlight Initiative commissioned the production of this Compendium of Innovative and Good Practices and Lessons Learned to advance the broader evidence and knowledge base on ending VAWG and share effective practices that can be replicated and scaled up more widely.

Presenting a suite of over 50 case studies across the six original 'pillars' of the Spotlight Initiative, as well as cross-cutting themes, the Compendium provides policymakers and practitioners with practice-based knowledge on ending VAWG that is high-impact, innovative, sustainable by design and rooted in local needs and context. Codifying this expertise is particularly pertinent as Spotlight Initiative transitions to its next generation of programming and expands its universal reach, with the goal of further reducing the prevalence of violence in target communities from 1 in 3 to 1 in 5 women and girls within a decade. I encourage you to use the Compendium as a key source of information and evidence in designing and implementing programming to end violence against women and girls, to drive progress not only on Goal 5: Gender Equality, but across all the Sustainable Development Goals.

Erin Kenny Deputy Global Coordinator Spotlight Initiative

Acknowledgements

The Spotlight Initiative Secretariat would like to thank all those who contributed to and participated in the development of the Spotlight Initiative Compendium of Innovative and Good Practices and Lessons Learned.

This publication has benefited significantly from the committed participation of all Spotlight Initiative programmes who shared their rich knowledge and experiences. Special thanks in particular to Spotlight Initiative teams in Ecuador, Malawi, Papua New Guinea, Tajikistan and Trinidad and Tobago.

The Spotlight Initiative Secretariat is grateful for the valuable inputs received from Recipient UN Organizations during the review phase, in particular the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Children's Fund, and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime.

This Compendium could not have been possible without the courage of women and girl survivors who have spoken out about their experiences, and the resilience of women's rights advocates and feminist movements who remain so central to the fight to end gender-based violence.

The Compendium and associated activities were designed and coordinated by ImpactMapper, led by Alexandra Pittman, and overseen and coordinated by Heran Ayele and Amy Bretherton from the Spotlight Initiative Secretariat. This project is funded with generous support from the European Union.
